Bulletin

Yom HaShoah 5773

LONG BEFORE THE DAYS OF SOCIAL MEDIA, God had to “get the word out” in a way that would disseminate a single message to the entire diverse Israelite nation. According to tradition, when Israel received the Torah at Mount Sinai, while the message was one and the same, every Israelite heard it as if it were addressed directly to him or her. Like the manna – which tradition says tasted different to everyone according to each person’s preference – the Torah was experienced differently, according to the capacity of each learner. From Sinai onward, the desire to balance the plurality of the Jewish people with the singularity of God’s message has been key to any vision of Jewish education. In the same way, the Jewish community as a whole has been tasked with the project of constructing a sense of ahdut, “unity,” despite our varied approaches to Jewish life and living.

Manhattan’s East Side is a wonderful example of this balancing act, with Orthodox, Reform and Conservative synagogues – each a vibrant center of Jewish life, each providing a vision of Jewish life with its own inflection. Proud as I am of our sacred work here at Park Avenue, I take great joy in seeing the strength of our neighbors, knowing that each of our successes redounds on the collective. On a personal level, my local rabbinic colleagues have proven to be trusted confidants, partners and friends in the sacred task of community building. I have been blessed to be mentored by those who preceded my arrival, and I have tried to help other new colleagues acclimate as we have settled in over the past few years. Though we and our communities are all different, together we are united in our task of creating vibrant Jewish life on the East Side.

It is therefore with great excitement that I share the news of a Torah Learning Coalition – a consortium of East Side synagogues who have joined together to invite each others’ members across their thresholds to share in Torah learning opportunities. The purpose is to promote community regardless of denominational background. All are welcome!

Our first effort will be to study Pirkei Avot (Ethics of our Ancestors) in keeping with the tradition to study the six chapters during the weeks between Passover and Shavuot. Each week, one community rabbi will teach a chapter at one of the participating UES synagogues, inviting everyone in the community to step into another synagogue to learn our shared tradition. I have no doubt that the quality of my colleagues’ teaching and the lively discussions that will emerge from learning side-by-side with new faces will make each of these sessions intellectually and spiritually uplifting. Modest as this first effort is, I hope it is a first step towards many years of creative and fruitful collaboration among our congregations. Most of all, I know that as we approach Shavuot, we will have given expression to our ongoing goal of standing together at Sinai as one community.

See page 10 for the schedule of these Torah Learning Coalition sessions.

Can you count to 49?

“And from the day on which you bring the sheaf [omer] of elevation offering [in effect, the second night of Pesah] … you shall count off seven weeks. They must be complete” (Lev. 23:15).

THIS COUNTING, s'firat ha-omer, is done every evening. It is literally a count of each day from Pesah to Shavuot. Traditionally, the period of counting the Omer is considered a time of reduced joy responding to the tragic death of 24,000 of Rabbi Akiva’s students at this season. (B.T. Yevamot 62b) The historicity of the Talmudic account has been debated by scholars and frankly I, along with many liberal Jews, find these weeks of pseudo-mourning neither inspiring nor necessary. On the other hand, while I do not generally consider myself a mystic, I find the kabbalistic understanding of the sefirah both meaningful and instructive to a modern Jewish community.

The Kabbalists assigned one of God’s seven attributes to each week of the Omer: lovingkindness, discipline, compassion, endurance, humility, foundation, and sovereignty. Within each week, they then assigned an attribute to each day. Thus each of the 49 days of the Omer focuses on one or a combination of the attributes. For example: on the first day of the first week, concentrate on lovingkindness itself; on the second day, the discipline needed to embody kindness; on the third day, the compassion need for kindness; and so on. Once the second week begins, the pattern is repeated, but with discipline as the primary characteristic and a different attribute relating to discipline each day. See the chart below for more details.

In this system, each day of the Omer invites us to explore an aspect of our inner selves – our behavior in light of this characteristic – for the purpose of refining and improving ourselves. Jewish mysticism understands our liberation from Egypt to be not only an historical event, but a metaphor for the present. God physically delivered the Israelites from Egypt, but we must continue to liberate our spirit each and every year. When we focus and meditate on God’s attributes, we release our souls from spiritual bondage. After counting our 49 steps towards spiritual freedom, we are ready to accept the Torah on Shavuot. The Torah represents this freedom and the achievements we have made to emulate God’s divine attributes. Literally, we are counting the days to receiving the Torah, but we are also renewing our relationship with ourselves, God, and each other.

Week	Days	S'firot	Meaning
One	1-7	Hesed Lovingkindness	Through love we give meaning to life. Acts that emanate from the divine image within.
Two	8-14	Gevurah Discipline	Our ability to set boundaries upon our behavior. The creation of structure within the framework of freedom.
Three	15-21	Tiferet Compassion	Using compassion to discover the truth and beauty in all of God’s creations.
Four	22-28	Netzah Endurance	Striving to fill our days with meaning and purpose, achieving our potential.
Five	29-35	Hod Humility	Recognizing our flaws and developing a sense of patience and gratitude.
Six	36-42	Yesod Foundation	Planting the seeds for the next generation; personal, familial, and Jewish continuity.
Seven	43-49	Malkhut Sovereign	Experiencing the immanent presence of God each and every day.

For instructions on how to count the omer each evening, including the b'rakhah, visit pasyn.org, click on Holidays and then on Omer Counting Calendar 5773. Visit the Rothschild Library to see examples of different kinds of omer counters, including ones that incorporate the idea of the s'firot.

Like the Wind in the Field

BY MENACHEM ROSENSAFT

“UNDER YOUR WHITE STARS,” the poet Abraham Sutzkever wrote in the Vilna Ghetto, “I stretch to You my white hand. My words are tears that want to rest in Your hand. ... And I want so much, loyal God, to entrust my wealth to You, because a fire burns within me, and in the fire, my days. But in cellars and holes cries the murderous silence. I run higher, over rooftops, and I search, where are You, where?”

On February 27, 1946, Sutzkever described the surreal horrors of the ghetto in his testimony before the International Military Tribunal at Nuremberg. “In the first days of August 1941 a German seized me in the Dokumenskaia Street. ... The German said to me, ‘Come with me, you will act in the circus.’ As I went along I saw that another German was driving along an old Jew, the old rabbi of this street ... and a third German was holding a young boy. When we reached the old synagogue on this street I saw that wood was piled up there in the shape of a pyramid. A German drew out his revolver and told us to take off our clothes. When we were naked, he lit a match and set fire to this stack of wood. Then another German brought out of the synagogue three scrolls of the Torah, gave them to us, and told us to dance around this bonfire and sing Russian songs. Behind us stood the three Germans; with their bayonets they forced us toward the fire and laughed. When we were almost unconscious, they left.”

Listening to Sutzkever’s poem, hauntingly set to music by Abraham Brodno who did not survive, we become connected if only for a few moments with the Jews who heard the song there, in what Elie Wiesel has called “the Kingdom of Night.” We sense and internalize the desperation of his search. And when we listen to the lyrics of Leyb Rozental’s Yisrolik, first performed by the Vilna Ghetto theater in 1942, about a young street peddler who sells cigarettes and saccharine in order to stay alive, we are reminded that the Jews who suffered in the Shoah, those who were murdered and those who survived, were not and must never be allowed to become anonymous statistics. “Don’t think I was born into this squalid street. I once had parents but I lost them both, and now I am left like the wind in the field. My name is Yisrolik, but when no one’s looking, I silently wipe away a tear from my eye.”

On Sunday April 7, at 6:00 pm, it will once again be our sacred obligation to join together as a community to remember the victims of the Holocaust through music by and about them, and through the reminiscences of members of Park Avenue Synagogue about their Holocaust survivor parents. The survivors gave us the priceless legacy of memories. We must now be their witnesses.

Synagogue Family

BNEI MITZVAH

JORDANA BLUMBERG

April 6 | Parashat Sh'mini

Daughter of Alissa & Kenneth Blumberg

Jordana began her education in the Purple AM room at PASECC and has continued in the Congregational School ever since. A 7th grader at the Spence School, she enjoys playing volleyball and squash in addition to dancing with Spence's Middle School Dance Company. Jordana is looking forward to her sixth summer at Raquette Lake Girls Camp, where she enjoys playing tennis, water-skiing and gymnastics.

Jordana is a thoughtful, generous friend and a loving sister. She loves all animals and is deeply concerned about those who are endangered. For her mitzvah project, Jordana will organize a blanket and towel drive for the animals at the Leo Zoological Conservation Center in Greenwich, Connecticut. She also plans to contribute a portion of her Bat Mitzvah gifts to help fund a new enclosure for one of the orphaned white-handed gibbons living at the center.

Jordana and her family would like to thank all her teachers and the clergy at PAS for their guidance and support during her preparation to become a Bat Mitzvah.

CHLOE ADRIANNA SAFRA

Minha | April 6 | Parashat Tazria/M'zora

Daughter of Mara Safra & Jacques Safra

Chloe began her education in the Purple Room at PAS and continued her Jewish studies in the Congregational School.

She is currently a 7th grader at The Churchill School, where she enjoys participating in the Karaoke Club, Cooking Club and Performing Arts. Chloe's passion is ballet. She began her dance studies as a 2-year-old and has continued to grow as a dancer, currently studying at the Harkness Dance Center at the 92nd Street Y.

In honor of her becoming a Bat Mitzvah, Chloe has volunteered at the PAS Food Pantry as well as for DOROT. She was fortunate to be part of the PAS Bnei Mitzvah Family trip to Israel this past December. In addition to learning about the historical importance and challenges of Israel, she learned about the growing problem of poverty in Israel. The PAS group spent one morning packing boxes of food for families in Tel Aviv. Chloe also visited a Youth Village in the North of Israel to share her passion for dance with young Israeli students, which was an especially meaningful experience.

Chloe (and her family) wish to thank her tutor, Ariela Wallace, as well as the Park Avenue Clergy and staff for helping her to prepare for this momentous day!

GABRIELLE LAUREN FURMAN

April 13 | Parashat Tazria/M'zora

Daughter of Gail & David Furman

Gabrielle Lauren had her baby naming at Park Avenue Synagogue. She began her Jewish education in the ECC Purple

Room and has participated in the Congregational School since Gan. Gaby is a PAS "lifer."

Gaby is currently a 7th grader at The Dalton School. She enjoys her summers at Raquette Lake Girls Camp but could do without the bugs! She likes tennis – but only when the ball is hit directly to her. She's a great skier – but only when the hills are flat!

In all seriousness, Gaby is a bright, fun, spirited young woman who embraces the color pink, not because it is feminine, but because it represents brightness, warmth and enthusiasm.

Gaby is happy to have participated in the PAS Bnei Mitzvah Family trip to Israel in 2010. It gave her a greater appreciation of Israel and of the wonderful people and clergy she is surrounded by at Park Avenue Synagogue. Gaby and all the Furmans would like to thank the staff, teachers and clergy for their guidance and tutelage in helping Gaby to achieve this milestone.

NATHANIEL AISENBERG
Minha | April 13 | Aharei Mot/K'doshim
Son of James & Suzanne Aisenberg

Nathaniel began his PAS education in the ECC Purple Room and over the past ten years has continued to learn and thrive in the PAS community. He is excited (and a bit nervous) to become a bar mitzvah as it brings joy to everyone around him but also responsibility as he enters his teenage years.

A 7th grade student at Aaron School, Nate enjoys math and social studies. His favorite out-of-school activities are basketball, swimming, chess and listening to music – especially The Beatles. He has spent the past two summers at Summit Camp in Honesdale, PA and is looking forward to returning this year.

Nate is fortunate to spend time with his three grandparents. His mitzvah project involves collaborating with his Grandpa Dick who has helped Nate bake challah that they will distribute through DOROT's Homeless Prevention Program.

The Aisenberg family is extremely grateful to the Park Avenue Synagogue clergy, tutors and the Matan Program teachers – all of whom have supported Nate throughout his years at PAS. Mazel tov, Nate!

ALEXANDER BENNETT COHEN
April 20 | Parashat Aharei Mot/K'doshim
Son of Ilona & Michael Cohen

Alexander is a 7th grader at Fieldston Middle School, where his favorite subject is history. He plays trumpet in the school band and plays on the school football and swim teams. He has a great sense of humor and makes friends easily.

Alexander's true passion is basketball. He loves going to Knicks and Nets games with his family. He plays in the Safe Haven and Yorkville leagues, is the starting center on the 92nd Street Y basketball team, and plays pickup games at the 92nd Street Y and in Central Park. He also has an artistic side and loves to draw.

Alexander has enjoyed attending PAS Congregational School since Kindergarten. The highlight of his PAS experience was the December 2010 PAS family trip to Israel. He has been volunteering in the Food Pantry as part of his bar mitzvah preparation. Alexander will also donate to Kids of Courage, an organization that provides medically supervised trips for children with serious medical diagnoses.

Alexander loves spending time with his little brother Ethan and his dog Flippy. He enjoys spending time with his grandparents and cousins. He is very excited to celebrate his bar mitzvah at Park Avenue Synagogue with his friends and family.

Alexander wants to thank all the fine teachers he has had at Park Avenue Synagogue, his tutor Abe and the entire clergy.

SARI REEDE LIEBHABER
April 20 | Parashat Aharei Mot/Kedoshim
Daughter of Lisa Beth & Andrew Liebhaber

Sari has been a member of the Park Avenue Synagogue community since her baby naming. She began her education at the Early Childhood Center, and continues her studies in the Congregational School.

A 7th grader at Columbia Preparatory School, Sari is a conscientious student. She is a gifted mathematician in honors math and enjoys science and foreign languages.

A talented and beautiful dancer, Sari studies ballet in the Pre-Professional ballet program at Ballet Academy East. She has been dancing with BAE for ten years. December marked Sari's seventh season performing in Dances Patrelle's, "The Yorkville Nutcracker." Her devotion and discipline to the art of dance is inspirational.

Sari spends summers at Central Pennsylvania Youth Ballet and Camp Vega in Maine. There she loves spending time with friends, water skiing, outdoor adventure, and as a member of the Vega Dance Company.

Sari is a loving daughter and a kind sister to her older brother Josh. Parashat Aharei Mot/Kedoshim speaks of "Love your neighbor as yourself." This quote is fitting for Sari since she often thinks of others and their feelings before her own.

Our family would like to thank the clergy, teachers and staff at PAS for their guidance and wisdom over the years, especially in helping Sari become a Bat Mitzvah.

בני מצה BNEI MITZVAHCALLIE JORDAN SMITH

April 27 | Parashat Emor

Daughter of Linda Yarden & Chris Smith

Callie's trademark smile was a fixture in the Orange room at the PAS Early Childhood Center. Her effervescence and her unbounded enthusiasm are ever-present, now in the Congregational School, and at The Town School, where her favorite subjects include history, science and the arts. A competitive swimmer, Callie has been on the winning JCC Thunderbirds swim team for 4 years, and has recruited her brother Eric as a teammate. She spends summers at Pine Forest Camp in Greeley, PA and excels in swimming, Zumba and volleyball.

Callie journeyed to Israel this past December with the PAS Bnei Mitzvah Family Trip. She was fascinated by the recently excavated City of David, the Shiloh pools and the Kotel. While in Jerusalem, Callie met Lone Soldiers of the IDF, to whom she is now committing her mitzvah project.

Callie and her family are grateful for her education at PAS and thank Ronit Aranoff, Rabbis Rein, Rudin, Zuckerman and Cosgrove, Cantors Kidron and Schwartz and the entire synagogue community for their support in reaching this milestone.

April - June

Photographer Lloyd Wolf and poet Sherri Waas Shunfenthal have collaborated to create an innovative and beautifully thoughtful body of work exploring aspects of time as understood and expressed in Judaism. While Western philosophy contends that time is linear, we Jews live in circles – the circle of seasons, circle of memory, the circles of our history and traditions, and circles of family that connect us through the generations.

LLOYD WOLF is an award-winning photographer based in Arlington, VA. He has had over 100 national and international solo and group exhibitions, and has work included in the collections of numerous noted museums and archives.

SHERRI WAAS SHUNFENTHAL is a free-lance writer/poet whose work has appeared in magazines, books, and artwork. She is the author of Sacred Voices: Women of Genesis Speak.
